

What is it meant by a Medical Home?

The Medical Home is the focal point through which an individual receives acute, chronic, and preventive medical services. Through an on-going relationship with a family physician in their medical home, patients can be assured of care that is accessible, accountable, comprehensive, integrated, patient-centered, safe, scientifically valid, and satisfying to both patients and their physicians. Patients in a medical home also have on-site access to allied health care professionals such as psychologists and pharmacists. Healthcare received in the context of a medical home has been shown to result in better health outcomes, higher patient satisfaction, and lower healthcare costs.
